Stem cells are the building blocks of the human body. They have the remarkable ability of being able to create copies of themselves and turn into different types of cells. blood cancer